Zen PDF Studio

Markdown-lite in, paginated Bangla-safe pages out. Eleven contrast-tuned themes, a lane-colourising engine with 788 keywords, and PDF export — all offline, in one file, with no server and no third-party code in the source. The manuscript is the point; the chrome gets out of the way.

01
PREPARE
Raw text in. Nothing is discarded here.

02
BLOCK-PARSE
Lines become blocks. A construct it cannot read raises a diagnostic.

03
INLINE-PARSE
Bold, italic, code, links, footnotes finish before colour exists.

04
COLORIZE
Lanes receive text segments only. Returning them unchanged is a normal outcome.

05
RENDER
Paginated pages, folios, keep-with-next, widow control.

WHY THE STAGES ARE FENCED

The bug this law kills: markdown was being discarded whenever the colouriser found nothing to do. Because no stage may consume output from earlier than its immediate predecessor, an unchanged return from COLORIZE can never cascade backwards into lost formatting.

CONTRAST IS COMPUTED, NEVER PICKED

Every lane colour is walked toward the page foreground until it clears 4.6:1 against the page ground, per WCAG luminance. The codex is one sentence: one hue = one meaning; text never below 4.5:1, or it does not ship.
